

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An image scanner scans and stores a document as a color image and a monochrome image when color mode is set. In accordance with specifications of a destination apparatus, an appropriate image is selected as between the stored color image and monochrome image, and the selected image is transmitted to the destination apparatus. The image scanner is thus capable of efficiently transmitting a scanned image to apparatuses having various specifications.